from the director

It is my great pleasure to share with you some of the highlights of the 2014-2015 academic year in the Armacost Library. Many of our accomplishments are noted in this report and yet much of what we do is not evident in these pages. We highlight our role in teaching and learning, in renovating our spaces to become more welcoming and inclusive, and in leveraging technology to provide better access to our collections.

We don't want to overlook the people who do all the work. The library invested in professional development this year with webinars, tutorials, and on-site training. Of particular importance, the library invested in training for staff on the use of our interlibrary loan system called ILLiad. An ILLiad trainer was on campus two full days to help us better utilize the technology, as well as streamline our procedures for making ILLiad faster and more efficient.

We appreciate our student workers as well, who are indispensable. Many of our student workers stay with us their entire college career, and a few even longer! We have several alums on staff.

When you visit the library and walk around a bit you will undoubtedly notice some empty shelving. This is the result of a concerted effort to make space for student scholars by removing the print journals that have duplicated the online journals and to replace reference materials with their online equivalents. In the "building for success" section of this annual report you will read a bit more about this goal.

We have much to celebrate, many accomplishments, and new endeavors to look forward to. Thank you for supporting us.

teaching & learning

The library faculty at University of Redlands continues their own action research project related to acquisition of information literacy skills and practices. Findings thus far have focused on library instruction in first-year seminars. Results suggest that library instruction enables first-year students to better understand the characteristics of peer-reviewed literature, to identify more efficient, subject-specific search strategies, and recognize a primary source. With recursive information literacy instruction, students do even better.

Percentage of students able to identify best description of a peer-reviewed journal by number of library instruction workshops students attended.

During 2013-2015, University of Redlands participated in Project Information Literacy's Lifelong Learning Study, a large-scale quantitative study investigating how a sample of "relatively recent" college graduates from ten U.S. colleges and universities find, evaluate, and use information for learning once they leave campus. Key trends for University of Redlands alumni included:

-University of Redlands alumni "were more avid public library users than the total pool of graduates in [the] study sample."

-University of Redlands alumni far outpaced the rest of the sample in their reporting of making use of critical thinking skills learned in college used for finding and using information.

The library relies on the philanthropic generosity of alumni and other friends. This year we are especially grateful to the family of Dr. Ralph E. Hone, Professor Emeritus in English, who donated his important collection of literature and religion books.

A new exhibit in the third-floor display cabinets honors other donors from years past. Armacost Library is proud to house the following:

- CHARLES WALLACE COLLECTION OF TV AND MOTION PICTURE SCRIPTS.
- EDITH M. ABBOTT'S UNIQUE ART OBJECTS.
- KUM PUI LAI ('33) EARLY DONOR TO THE HAWAII PACIFIC COLLECTION.
- MARJORIE CALL'S EXTENSIVE MUSIC COLLECTION.

20 Number of STUDENT WORKERS employed by the library

The library hires many student workers to help with the day-to-day operations of the library. Some work the circulation desk helping check out books, answer questions, and help patrons find what they are looking for, among other things. Some work in the technical services and acquisitions areas helping with cataloging and processing newly purchased books and other materials for the library.

Our student workers are knowledgeable, courteous and willing to assist wherever they can. They make our jobs easier and we couldn't run the library without them.

Student art from various classes was displayed in the library exhibit areas this past year. Our own student worker, Zack Schrimpf, created this colorful design for an assignment in René Azenaro's 2D Art class. Bravo Zack!

BUILDING FOR SUCCESS

The library repurposed former residence hall furniture to create more soft seating for our patrons who like to study and relax on the 3rd Floor.

We were lucky to have a therapy dog in the Jasper's Corner after-school program this past year – Redman provided comfort and reassurance to our young learners in the library. Thank you Redman and handler Ryan Sweet!

This year the library welcomed the Writing Studio! In this space, students and writing staff hold daily conversations about writing and best practice in a comfortable and open space.
